The new generation

When Germany's Davis Cup Team was faced with a possible relegation from the world group last autumn, a young German pro rose to the challenge. Cedric-Marcel Stebe (22) kept his cool and won the decisive match against Lleyton Hewitt. The Swabian had already reached the top 100, but for most visitors he was still a new face in the tennis circuit. But Stebe was in the spotlight at the Jugend Cup in Renningen and Rutesheim in 2006 - at the age of 15 - when he reached the doubles final.

The blond boy is only the most recent example of numerous players who have already drawn some attention at the Jugend Cup and are now playing professional tournaments. Belinda Bencic is another name one should keep in mind: at the age of 13 she won the U16 category, last year, the fifteen-year-old played her debut match for the Swiss Fed Cup Team. Ernest Gulbis (LET) and Andrey Golubev are also former Jugend Cup participants who currently play Davis Cup for their countries. The young German Antonia Lottner participated at this year's Porsche Grand Prix in Stuttgart, five years ago she played in Renningen and Rutesheim. All these players are a perfect proof that the Jugend Cup can serve as a stepping stone for the later career.

„The Jugend Cup is one of the best-organized junior tournaments in Europe“, says Davis Cup winner and DTB Vice President Charly Steeb about the Tennis Europe event. According to him „the best players of Europe participate here“. But it is not only the perfect organisation which brings the best talents of the world to Swabia. The Jugend Cup is the only tournament in Europe where both categories (U14 / U16) are rated as Category 1. Also, the hosts offer services to the players worthy of a pro tournament, e.g. shuttle service, medical assistance or special nutrition.

So there will for sure be some players at this year's Jugend Cup who will make the big headlines in the next years. From 17 to 24 August these extraordinary talents compete for trophies, ranking points and a place in Jugend Cup history in Rutesheim (main site), Renningen and Weisach-Flacht. Join us, when the future stars show what they are made of.
